The International Souvenir Card Exchange includes upward of 6,000 members living in every section of the world. Its object is to collect and exchange scuvenir post cards. The members correspond with each other on these cards. It was founded about two years ago with a very small membership. In St. Louis alone it now has over 100 members. The local headquarters are at No. 104 North Fourth street.

Meetings of the newly organized brench will be held on the first Monday of each month. Discussions regarding the entertainment of foreign post card collectors who come to St. Louis in 1994, plans for exchange of addresses and card designs, will be taken up at the next neeting. A resolution was adopted advocating the extensive use of post cards, with views of buildings of the World's Fair and similar illustrations, as a means of advertising the Fair.

BUTLER WILL TAKE DEPOSITIONS TO-DAY

Resume of Testimony for Contestant Relative to Frauds Alleged to Have Been Perpetrated.

James J. Butler will begin taking depositions this morning in rebuttal to the testimony given by the witnesses for George C. R. Wagoner, who is contesting the election of Butler to Congress from the Twelfth District.

gross frauds had been perpetrated at the polls at the recent election, and that the election of Butler was illegal.

More than 30 witnesses were summoned by the counsel for Wagoner, but out of this number not more than one-third responded to the subpoenas and gave testimony. Many of those summoned appeared at the place to which they had been subpoenaed, but they were not called to the stand, while others refused to testify.

Depositions were first taken before one notary, and later on two more notaries were used, but testimony before the latter did not continue more than three or four days.

In order to substantiate the testimony given by witnesses the contestant made application to the Board of Election Commissioners for permission to recount and examine the ballots cast for Butler and Wagner in the sixty-four precincts of the Twelfth Congressional District.

The application was granted, and a force of clerks and stenographers began the work in the Election Commissioners office last Monday. The allegation having been made that the greatest frauds were perpetrated in the Fourth Ward, the ballots of that ward were the first to be examined.

WORK FINISHED SATURDAY.

WORK FINISHED SATURDAY.

After the first day it was discovered that the force employed was inadequate, and would not be able to finish the work before the contestant's time expired, which was Saturday night. Consequently the force was more than doubled, and the work was completed at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

The result of the recount was not disclosed Saturday, the work having been carried on under secrecy. It will require several days, however, to secure the total amount of votes cast as shown by the recount, and if it differs in any respect with the result of the official count, the fact will not be disclosed until the ballots cast in each precinct have been carefully added and compared with the official count.

The official count made at the Election Commissioners' office after the election resulted as follows: Butlet, 1684; Waggner, 19.551; Henry H. Artz, 257; George D. Reynolds, 2. Butler's plurality was given as 6.23. It is not known by either the contestant or the contestee whether the recount differs from the result shown in the foregoing.

Witnesses for the contestant testified differs from the result shown in the foregoing.

Witnesses for the contestant testified that there were frauds and that there were not. With possibly one or two exceptions all of the witnesses testified that there were no assaults committed at the polls.

Some of the Republican election officials testified that when the votes were counted there were more ballots in the box than should have been as shown by the poll books. Others swore that a number of the ballots had been voted without being numbered or initiated by the judges, but most of these, witnesses declared, were thrown out at the count. Many other Republican judges and clerks testified that there were no tregularities at the polls where they served.

The majority of the contestant's witnesses were asked to testify regarding the

The inajority of the contestant's witnesses were asked to testify regarding the persons who were registered from certain places. Many of them testified that men whom they had never known were registered from their own houses, while some of the same witnesses, on cross-examination, contradicted their own testimony on direct examination by saying they did know those who were registered from the place in question, or declaring that the persons might have lived there, but the witness did not know their names.

EVIDENCE NOT GENERAL. Several witnesses testified to having seen crowds of men visit various polling places on election day, enter the polls, come out and re-enter, but could not say that these men had voted. peating was not as general as was expected.

Much of the testimony indicated that there were irregularities in many of the procincts, but none of the winesses could testify positively that fraudulent votes had been cast, although many declared that large numbers of men registered more than once, and in many instances these names were stricken from the lists when the revision was made.
